Introduction

This document provides Extreme Networks software lifecycle planning information for use by customers and partners, and outlines the timeframes when software feature enhancements, maintenance releases, and technical support are available.

WARRANTY: Extreme Networks offers firmware, operating system software, and application software products, with various warranties included in the software purchase price. Please refer to specific product literature for warranty details.

SERVICES: Extreme Networks also offers various services at additional cost. Refer to the Services Solutions web page for details: <http://www.extremenetworks.com/support/customer-care>

All products which are covered by warranty, or a valid service contract are eligible for software upgrades, and technical support, per the specific terms of the warranty or service contract.

Switching Products

ExtremeXOS® and ExtremeWare®

- ExtremeXOS operating system software are typically supported three years after the initial General Availability (GA) of a major release.
 - End of Engineering (EoE) occurs 24 months after initial GA, and no new features or scheduled maintenance releases are planned after this date.
 - End of Support (EoSupport) occurs 36 months after GA, and no more bug fixes or patch releases are planned after this date.
- Major releases are typically scheduled every six months while sustaining releases are scheduled every three to six months.
